

Library Turning the Page On Next 50 Years

From card catalogs to digital collections, the Cranberry Public Library has helped fuel and facilitate the community's thirst for knowledge for decades.

Five of them, to be exact.

As the Library celebrates its 50th anniversary, the community's continued support is more important than ever. Via the annual fundraising campaign, you can continue supporting a community staple that promotes and supports lifelong learning, sharing, collaboration, creativity, and discovery.

While tactile library cards and the services offered have changed since 1973, the Library's core goals and mission have not. Your contribution can make all the difference towards adding an additional program, a new book, improving technology services, or simply keeping our community connected.

At its core, that is our mission. Folks like patron L.M. depend upon us to stay in the loop and explore their interests. At 73, L.M. prefers, "the old-fashioned way" of doing things – no TV, no internet, no smartphone.

His connection to the world comes through our books. He's learned everything from mushroom foraging to indoor plant identification to rock collecting. And, as has been the foundation of learning for centuries, he's thrilled to share that information with our staff and patrons. It helps keep everyone's brains sharp and forges a connection.

This is the type of connection that has become the expectation, and we work hard to ensure it remains the standard. With something for everyone, regardless of age, the Library has become a cornerstone for the community.
