

DON'T GET

FROZEN

THIS WINTER

KEEP WATER FLOWING WHEN TEMPERATURES DIP

With temperatures dipping below the freezing mark, the strain on household pipes could lead to a frozen, flooded disaster.

To avoid these winter water woes, follow these recommendations:

- Know the location of the water meter to ensure quick shutoff in an emergency.
- Open cabinet doors under sinks and to enclosed water meters to allow air to circulate.
- Keep thermostats no lower than 55 degrees.
- Disconnect garden hoses and turn off indoor valves to outside faucets.
- Insulate water lines using foam tubes or heat tape.
- If a home will be empty for a few days, turn off water at the meter.
- If temperatures are below zero, let a small stream of water flow.
- To find the frozen portion, run a damp rag along the exposed pipe. The ice plug is where frost appears.
- Thaw the pipe slowly using a hair dryer. Do not use a flame or torch.
- Be careful of electric shock in areas of standing water.
