

Watch The Water

Ways to Conserve During Hot Periods

Everyone likes a green, lush lawn.

Everyone also likes to have water flow when they turn on their faucets.

As sweltering summer weather reaches its peak, there are a few steps customers can take to stop potential shortages before they start and save money in the process.

- Water early in the morning, which ensures more water soaks into the lawn or garden.
- If using a sprinkler system, set a timer and make sure the system is in good working order.
- Fix leaking spigots, and occasionally check for leaks in hoses and lines.
- Use a rain barrel or other system to recycle rainwater.
- Use landscaping, mulch, and flower beds to keep water within the soil.
- Use a broom or leaf blower to clear debris instead of a hose.
- Cut grass on a higher mower setting. This allows the grass to grow deeper roots and become more resilient.
- A simple test for checking if the lawn needs water: Step on it. If the grass springs back, it doesn't need watered.
- These simple tips will help keep lawns looking lush and water flowing freely for everyone.
